

MULTILINGUALISM IN MOROCCO MOTHER TONGUE AND THE LANGUAGES OF SCHOOLING

Idmoulid Mohammad
Faculty of Education Sciences - Rabat
University of Mohamed V - Souissi

Abstract-This study aims to understand the mother tongue of this community, but : the most important stations made by the language in Morocco, this latter a multilingual country, there is on the one hand languages motherhood; represented in Tamazight and rolling stock, on the other hand there is an Arab school and the Amazigh language as an official language taught in schools based on Constitutional Amendments carried out by Morocco in September 2012, in addition to other foreign languages such as French and English. For axes article has the researcher an exploratory study included the following broad categories of children from elementary school through middle and secondary education through to university education, which is the semi-final stage is the identification and orientation of jurisdiction. It was the goal of this study is to monitor the number of hours studying the various languages in addition to investment institutions teaching these languages in some materials. The research was concluded in the last to reveal that the number of hours allocated to the languages in decreasing so not refer to the level of language development of the child and is due at the level of accumulation of teaching materials, both literary and scientific and technical personnel.

Keywords: Multilingualism, Educational System, Morocco